DENIES "POISON PEN" PLOT IS INTERFERING

Asserts Candler Sent Her Wire, Suggesting He Postpone Reno Trip Until "Storm Blows Over."

Reno, Nev., August 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—Mrs. Onesima de Bouchelle, former New Orleans society club and suffragette leader, admitted today that there are elements militating against her proposed marriage to Asa Candler, Atlanta multimillionaire, but denied knowledge of any "poison pen" plot calculated to break off the match.

Mrs. De Bouchelle declared that objection to the marriage has been voiced by members of the Candler family on religious grounds. Mr. Candler's brother, who, she said, is a senior bishop of the Methodist church, south, at Atlanta, has opposed for that reason, according to her statement today.

"In the first place I am a Catholic and a divorcee," Mrs. De Bouchelle asserted, "and I have been in society and have been a suffrage leader, and Bishop Candler does not approve of any of these things."

Emphasis of business and the $100,000 damage suit brought recently by Mrs. Sarah G. Byfield against Candler's son, Walter, Atlanta banker, have been combined to delay Candler's trip west, according to Mrs. De Bouchelle's statement. She said she received a telegram from him today seeking her acquiescence in the suggestion that he postpone his trip until the "storm blows over."

She has never heard of the writing of any "poison pen" letters, she declared emphatically, and has not hired detectives for any purpose. She recently retained Harold A. Moise, a New Orleans attorney, to look after her property interests in the absence of her regular attorneys who is away on his vacation, she stated.

MEDDLING CHARGED BY NEW ORLEANS LAWYER

New Orleans, August 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—More than one person has "intermeddled" in the affairs of Mrs. Onesima de Bouchelle, who recently announced her engagement to Asa Candler of Atlanta, and "slandered her," according to a statement authorized by Harold A. Moise, New Orleans attorney, who has been retained by Mrs. De Bouchelle to investigate the alleged "meddling."

"I wish to state that Mrs. De Bouchelle's plans have not in any way been checked or hindered by the acts of two or three evasive intermediaries and slandersers," said Mr. Moise. "She is living quietly at her home in Reno and will remain there unless there should be reason for her to do otherwise."

"As to the reports sent out from here undertaking to represent her as other than the cultured gentleman that she is, they were inspired by disapproval and malice, and have totally failed of effect," continued Mr. Moise, whose statement followed re-

On Day Miners Resume
Work Coal Rises $1.25 Per Ton.

Springfield, Ill., August 24.—There were 90,000 lame backs in Illinois Thursday night. They belonged to coal miners coming out of the pits after the first day's work since April 1.

Production was resumed in every big mining center throughout the state and so quickly did cutters get on the job that coal was raised from deep shafts late in the day.

By Friday daily production will reach 250,000 tons, according to operators, and by next week Illinois mines will be turning out 340,000 tons every 24 hours.

With the opening of the mines, hundreds of housewives lost work and malds and miner's wives and daughters have been working to support families during the strike.

Reentment was shown by mine union officials here when, on the first day of operation, the operators tilted the price of coal $1.25 a ton at the mine. It was declared that the operators have lost practically nothing during the strike because of prices they got for surplus stocks and that labor is costing no more now than on April 1.

The new prices go into effect in this district at once and retailers will have to pay $5 a ton at the mine instead of $3.75. This price, retailers said, would be immediately passed on the public.

PERPETUAL PEACE TREATY IS SIGNED
BY THREE NATIONS

New Orleans, August 24.—A perpetual peace treaty between the republics of Honduras, Salvador and Nicaragua has been signed by representatives of the three countries, according to a telegram received today by E. Toledo Lopez, Honduran consul in New Orleans, from Dr. P. Baez, Honduran minister for foreign relations.

The brief message read:
"Peace assured forever by conference on Tacoma."

The conference was held on board the United States cruiser Tacoma, was also attended by the American ministers accredited to the three republics, who, however, took no active part in the negotiations, it was said. It was understood the three governments pledged themselves not to sponsor any plot or to allow any agitation which would tend to political disturbances.

REGULARS OF STATE
REJECT BORAH PLANK

News Received Eagerly
in California, Where Hiram Johnson Also Threatens to Bolt.

San Francisco, August 24.—The possibility of a new and independent political party, to be headed by Senator William E. Borah, is causing wide interest throughout the west. The report was given definite form Thursday by news from Nampa, Idaho, that the "Idaho progressive party," generally regarded as Borah's personal political machine, has launched a boom for "Borah for president" on an independent ticket in 1924.

At the same time the Idaho republican state convention, meeting at Wallace, rejected a direct primary plank advocated by Borah, by a vote of 171 to 31, and took a stand advocating the Fordney-McCumber tariff in the face of Borah's opposing vote in the senate. The "Idaho progressive party" endorsed the direct primary system.

While in the past Borah has always had Idaho in his vest pocket, he stands on the tariff, especially his vote against "schedule 11" on wool, has aroused wide opposition and caused a split in the republican ranks, in which Borah came out with a decided minority.

Sheep-Raising State. Idaho republicans are strongly supporting the wool tariff because Idaho is a sheep-raising state. The cattle interests are also said to resent Borah's vote against the entire bill. Borah does not come up for re-election until 1924.

News of the Idaho situation has aroused wide interest in California, where reports are current that Hiram Johnson, should he meet defeat in a republican primary next Tuesday, will bolt the party and run as an independent.

Johnson has a record for political performances of this sort. He ran as an independent republican in 1910 for the governorship, bolted the party in 1912 when he was a candidate for vice president on the Bull Moose ticket, was re-elected to the governorship in 1914 as a progressive and captured both the republican and progressive nominations for senator in 1916.

Following in the wake of hints that William Randolph Hearst may bolt the democratic party in New York, the formation of a Johnson-Borah-Hearst triumvirate is not regarded as an improbability.

Should Johnson be returned to the senate as a republican, a different complexion would be given to the possible organization.

Idaho citizens are eagerly awaiting word from Washington as to Borah's position.

Deputy Sheriffs Sidney Howell and Brooks Hall, of Early county, accompanied by William Powell, negro, the confessed slayer of Deputy Sheriff Omar Howell, of Blakeley, Ga., brother of Sidney Howell, spent several hours in Atlanta Thursday after a railway journey of 1,500 miles from Mechanicsville, N. The negro, after deliberately shooting down the Early county deputy, made his escape and officers the country over were enlisted in the search for him. Citizens of Early county offered a reward of $750 and to this Governor Hardwick added $500 for the capture of the fugitive.

New Orleans, August 24.—An error on the part of the central telephone operator, who connected him with the federal narcotic office when he called for the number of a prospective customer, led to the arrest of Paul Leon, and the seizure of $5,000 worth of morphine in his possession, according to federal narcotic agents who made the arrest.

The mixup in numbers on the part of the telephone operator, the federal agents say, was no part of any plan they had conceived to catch "dope" sellers, but the mistake in numbers led to an appointment for a meeting with Leon, and his arrest and the seizure of the morphine followed.

REPUBLICAN MEMBERS

Chaotic Industrial Condi-

Constitution Bureau,
Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, August 24.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—President Harding, by his appeal to congress for legislative measures against future strikes in the coal mines and on the railroads, has not succeeded in evading his own responsibility for the continuance of the two present conflicts, but has unmistakably thrust the issue into every political subdivision in which members of congress are to be elected next November. This is the view of impartial onlookers who have been expecting this move from Mr. Harding.

The effect of what President Harding has done in his attempts to make congress share the difficulties and criticism which his vacillation and procrastination have brought upon him is to involve the legislative branch as well as the executive department of the republican administration in the hopeless muddle. But apparently the republican senators and representatives are going to contribute nothing to rescue the president or the country from the chaos into which both have been plunged by the attempt to play politics with a grave industrial crisis.

The talk of a recess of congress heard weeks ago is still heard after the echoes of the president's call for help have died away. Republican congressmen are seemed resolved to let the presidential recommendations, such as they were, lie in cold storage until after the strikes have settled not only without the administration's assistance, but in spite of the whole situation. Politicians in congress have already let it be known that Mr. Harding's proposals, except that for the creation of a commission of inquiry into the coal industry, "would go over until the next session of congress," which means until after the election. It stands that nothing has yet been done to relieve the immediate situation.

Issues Home First.

Republican senators and representatives who go back to their bailiwicks to stand for re-election will find that President Harding's call upon the party for a remedy for the country's industrial troubles present and prospective, has preceded them home. Besides all the other issues which are already confronting them, these republican candidates for congress will have to face the issue of the administration's utter failure to terminate the big strikes.

Until President Harding went to congress the voters were asking, at long range, "Why doesn't the white house settle this thing?" They now will be demanding, "Why haven't you congressmen stung the job and unsanctified this tangled the president has got us into?"

In short, the whole problem of the strikes was confined within the walls of the white house until last Friday. Then President Harding carried it to the capital and put it in the political pasture of congress. There it will remain, to provide the scrutiny and

Washington, August 24.—Government operation of the coal mines and federal control of coal distribution in such a manner as to prevent profiteering were proposed in measures introduced today in the senate. Other developments in the coal and rail situation included:

Decision by the senate labor committee to substitute the Borah coal commission bill for the Winslow commission bill, passed yesterday by the house.

Demand in the senate for prompt and drastic government action to end both the coal and rail strikes.

A suggestion by Chairman Borah, of the senate labor committee, that the authorities of other states follow the lead of Governor Miller, of New York, in dealing with their local coal situations.

A declaration by Chairman Cummings, of the senate interstate commerce committee, that congress at its next session would take up industrial problems with a view to determining "what plutoniumism should occupy in the civilization of the United States."

Control Resolution.

A resolution empowering the president to take over and operate the mines was introduced by Senator Walsh, democrat, Massachusetts, after a long and heated senate debate and was referred to the interstate commerce commission. To this same committee was sent an administration bill offered by Senator Cummins proposing to create a federal coal distribution agency, which, working through the interstate commerce commission, would control not only distribution of but profiteering in coal. Chairman Cummings called a meeting of his committee for Saturday to consider the administration measure.

The senate is expected to act first on the Borah substitute for the Plans for making Atlanta the world's greatest inland spot cotton market were discussed by the directors of the Atlanta Commercial Exchange at a special called meeting at the chamber of commerce at noon Thursday in connection with the recent announcement by the Shippers' Commission company of the leasing of the monster Candler warehouse. The warehouse, which will be devoted entirely to storing and merchandising cotton, has a capacity of approximately 250,000 bales, and more than doubles Atlanta's former capacity for handling spot cotton.

J. H. Tighe, secretary of the commercial exchange, declared after the meeting that the directors of the exchange were sure that the increased facilities for cotton handling, which gives Atlanta a warehouse capacity of around 400,000 bales of cotton, combined with the preferential rail road rates on cotton secured recently and the immense banking resources of the city would make Atlanta the logical center of the spot cotton trade of the United States.

Atlanta is a center from which cotton can be shipped with equal facility either to the southern seaports of Charleston, Savannah, Brunswick and Jacksonville, for export to European mills, or direct by rail to the great mills of New England and North Carolina, according to Mr. Tighe.

Vancouver, B. Recent dispatches from Nome indicated an expedition sent to the island last summer by Stefansson was returning. This expedition raised the British flag and claimed the island, which is rich in furs and minerals, for Great Britain. The expedition on the Teddy Bear is carrying supplies to succor the former expedition if it should be encountered.

TARIFF AND SUBSIDY MEASURES IGNORED

Verdict Is That Republic-

Administration Record
in Campaign.

Constitution Bureau,
Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, August 24.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—Widespread comment was created at the capitol today over the failure of the republican state convention of Ohio yesterday to mention in their resolutions important legislative issues sponsored by the Harding administration.

According to press dispatches, the convention, after a bitter struggle in the committee on resolutions, rejected a ship subsidy plank which was brought from Washington by Congressman S. D. Fess, republican candidate for the United States senate. The ship subsidy bill is admitted to be President Harding's pet measure.

No mention was likewise made of the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill, now in conference, nor the soldier bonus bill. The only reference to the tariff question was in the form of a statement demanding a tariff representing the difference in cost of production at home and abroad, with no specific mention of the pending bill.

Indirect Repudiation.

In the eyes of capitol observers, the action of the convention is indicative of only one thing, which is that the Ohio republicans are leary of going before the voters of that state with the record of the Harding administration as an issue. By refusing to approve the Fordney-McCumber tariff bill, described as having the most excessive rates of any similar measure ever passed by congress, it is declared the convention indirectly repudiated the republican congress.

Although in the home state of President Harding, the Ohio republicans rejected the ship subsidy plank, which was proposed by Representative Fess, nominee for the senate at the instigation of the president, it is suggested. Then to avoid making the rejection of administration policies too conspicuous, it is charged, the platform offered the slogan "stand by the president," who was told that Ohio still has confidence in the "great and illustrious president in the white house."

Senator Allen Pomerene, democrat of Ohio, and others at the capitol Thursday appeared to be highly amused over the incident. The action of the convention, in certain quarters, was described as "cowardice," and an attempt to evade the issues of the day. Others declared that the Ohio republicans were cognizant of the danger of going before the polls in November with a clear-cut approval of the highly critical Fordney-McCumber tariff bill.

A significant feature about the whole affair, it is pointed out, is the fact that no explanation was offered for the attitude of the convention, and further, that Representative Fess, Carmi Thompson, republican nominee for governor; Walter Brown, chairman of the committee for recognition

Death of Irish Chieftain
Not in Vain, Say Free Statists.

Cork, August 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—Tom Hales, who led and accepted the responsibility for the ambush which killed Michael Collins, repudiated it today, threw down his arms and offered to join the national forces. Tom Hales is the brother of Sean Hales, a pro-treaty member of the daily Eireann. The former has been a fierce opponent of the treaty, and it is not known whether his offer to join the nationalists will be accepted.

He and his sister on last St. Patrick's day set fire to the platform at Bandon where a demonstration in favor of the treaty was being held under the auspices of his brother Sean and Canon Cohanlan, parish priest of Bandon.

His present change of front is regarded as significant and as giving point to the prevailing belief that the death of Michael Collins has not been in vain, as his action may animate his comrades to do likewise.

Sean Collins, proceeding from Clonakilty yesterday to attend his brother's funeral, had a trying experience. He was arrested on the Bandon-Macroom road by irregulars, who taunted him with lacking the courage "to stand up and be plugged" and spoke jubilantly of having "plugged" Michael, the traitor, referring to his brother Michael Collins.

Sean Collins remained in custody overnight but was released this morning, reaching here this evening. He left by special steamer for Dublin with General Ennis and Sean Hales.

ALL IRELAND MOURNS
WITH KITTY KIERNAN.

Dublin, August 24.—Resting in a plain oak coffin, the body of the Irish nation's hero, Michael Collins, was moved from St. Vincent's hospital Thursday night to the city hall, where it will lie in state until Monday.

Thursday was a day of sorrow and mourning in Dublin. Four officers of the free state army guarded the body of Collins as it lay in the mortuary chapel of the hospital. Collins was dressed in his uniform as commander of the army. A rosary was clasped in his hands.

Throughout the day a constant procession of weeping men and women passed the bier of the martyred Irish leader. Hundreds paused to kiss his forehead, or to murmur a prayer, but of all the sorrowing figures that stooped to honor Collins, none touched the hearts of the nation as did pretty Kitty Kiernan, the sweetheart of the dauntless "Mick." She was among the first to step within the little chapel where rested the remains of the man she loved.

The very day on which Collins was assassinated was to have been his and Kitty's wedding, and but for the death of Arthur Griffith, Collins' co-worker in the interest of the Free State, Miss Kiernan might have been a bride Thursday, instead of looking upon the dead face of her betrothed.

Nuptials Long Delayed.

Her marriage to Collins had been many times delayed as new crises arose and the Irish leader threw himself anew into the struggle. But recently it appeared that the fight against the irregulars was all but won, and the date of August 22 was set for the wedding, which all Ireland would celebrate.

Miss Kiernan had purchased her trousseau. Then Arthur Griffith

United News Staff Correspondent.
Washington, August 24.—It is now squarely up to the railroads to make good on their debt, to rail workers that they can operate despite the striking shipmen—and the first test of the railroads will be in coal shipments.

In making this point clear, administration officials, including Secretary Hoover, declare that with the reopening of many mines, the danger of a fuel famine, in so far as actual production of the coal is concerned, has passed its peak. If the country is to suffer acutely now, they say, it will be because of the railroads' failure to produce sufficient equipment to haul the coal.

Every power of the government, save that of actually purchasing fuel, is to be given the administration by congress to meet the situation. A bill has been introduced in the senate by Senator Cummins, strengthening the hands of the interstate commerce commission to permit of that commission giving positive priority to the movement of non-profiteering coal.

The alternative to this would be for the government to enter the coal business, as suggested by President Harding in his message to congress, purchase and distribute coal, and by such competition establish a balance in the price situation.

Both plans submitted to President Harding by Secretary Hoover, after consultation with Attorney General Daugherty developed, according to Hoover, that "any direct legislation for the repression of extortionate prices has no constitutional basis."

Hoover, in his letter to the president on the plans, declares a general preference for that "in which federal authority is exerted through extension of the priority powers of the interstate commerce commission." This is the plan in the main embodied in the Cummins' bill introduced in the senate Thursday, and which will be embodied in a similar bill to be presented to the house by representative Winslow.

Such procedure, Hoover wrote the president, would be "less cumbersome, requiring less extension in the federal organization and being more expeditious of application than the alternative plan through actual government possession of coal. The committee is in agreement that the exertion of such powers in times of peace is highly distasteful, and can only be justified as a measure necessary to provide for

Hoover, in his letter, took cognizance of the "inevitable and growing shortage in transportation" as combining with the "almost total exhaustion of coal stocks" to the end that "the difficulties of the country will be very great even with the resumption of coal production." Furthermore, he warned, "unless there is legislation enacted that will curb profiteering and will give control to distribution, there will be great suffering and difficulties during the period of readjustment."

My commission expires April 3, 1924.

the station today, is in the hands of the railroads—a transportation, not a coal production problem.

The big difficulty is locomotives, officially stated to be progressively deteriorating, and, no matter how many coal cars might be available, they can't be moved without engines. Furthermore, official figures show that to handle present demands, even were all available coal cars put into service, there would still be a shortage of some 10,000 in this equipment.

Therefore, while Hoover declares the peak of the crisis so far as producing coal has been passed, there remains the critical problem of moving that coal to suffering areas.

Shipments Far Behind.
During the long siege, Hoover revealed for the first time Thursday, only one-third of the tonnage needed to supply general priority demands, exclusive of those essential industries getting first call on coal, was supplied.

This fact has not been made public previously lest it evoke national alarm. A further amazing revelation is that the country, outside coal states, during the mine strike has been moving on approximately 1,000,000 tons of coal a week.

Through the increased powers granted the interstate commerce commission by congress—when congress acts—it will be possible for the government to virtually control coal shipments and thus curb profiteering by refusing cars to profiteering operators.

The executives still remain, however, the overshadowing question of whether the railroads will be able to bear up, under the strain of the increased demands upon them, and constantly deteriorating equipment resulting from the shopmen's strike.

INDIVIDUAL SETTLEMENT NEGOTIATIONS FRUITLESS.

New York, August 24.—Negotiations for a settlement of the railroad shopmen's strike on an individual basis continued apparently without success Thursday between the big five brotherhood mediators and a minority of executives, representing a score of roads.

The executives' counter proposals to the mediators' offer were of a nature, it was learned, to call for definite showdown by the shopmen when the deliberations are resumed Friday morning.

Several large roads previously opposed to individual agreements cast their lot with the minority of executives Thursday, bringing the total mileage represented to 55,000, or 30 per cent of the country's total.

Seaboard Represented.
Among the accessions was the Seaboard Air Line, with S. D. Warfield as spokesman.

Although both sides still expressed hope that some agreement might be reached, it was feared the overtures would be wrecked on the seniority issue, which has previously blocked a settlement between the shopmen and the executives as a whole.

The executives who met with the mediators Thursday made it clear that their move was not a result of discussion among the executives, and that they were in agreement with the majority in withholding seniority rights from returning strikers.

Hale Holden, president of Burlington, who acted as chairman of the minority executives' organization, declared:

Firm on Seniority.
"The railroads are all standing pat on seniority and any individual settlement will have to be made in the light of that understanding."

Warren S. Stone, chairman of the brotherhood mediation committee, returning to the conference room late Thursday after submitting the result of earlier discussions to Bert Jewell and other shopcraft leaders, said briefly:

"I am still optimistic, and am ready to stay here all week if necessary, to end the strike."

It is reported that other roads might join in considering the individual settlement proposals suggested by the trainmen's leaders Wednesday.

To Show Good Faith.
It was emphasized by T. De Witt Cuyler, chairman of the American Association of Railway Executives, that the minority was making large steps in an attempt to establish the good faith of the individual settlement plan, as the shopcraft leaders heretofore have resisted all efforts to end the strike on that basis.

For a time Thursday it was believed the train service brotherhoods would drop their effort to mediate. As the big five chiefs left a long conference, they announced:

"Everything is up to Mr. Jewell now."

After conferring with Jewell, however, Stone and his colleagues again went into session with the executives.

SENATORS FORSEE ACTUAL SUFFERING.

Washington, August 24.—(By the Associated Press.)—Senate discussion, the first extended debate on either the coal or rail strikes, brought expressions from practically all senators participating today that in their judgment there was bound to be actual hardships and suffering from lack of coal this winter even though the strikes be settled tomorrow.

Senator Calder, republican, New York, declared that New York city faced "a desperate" situation. He urged that operators and miners be given 48 hours in which to adjust their difficulties and that if they failed "it will be the duty of this congress to give to the president full and complete authority to take over the mines and to operate them for the benefit of the American people."

Senator Leavitt, republican, Wisconsin, declared that the situation with respect to both the coal and rail controversies was "so bad that the people's interest now justify more than mediation."

Demand Drastic Action.
Demanding immediate action to relieve what he said threatened to be a desperate situation this coming winter, Senator Walsh warned that there was "a growing belief among the people that in an emergency such as this they will be allowed to starve and die without relief from their government."

Senator Nelson, republican, Minnesota, expressed the opinion that the "whole trouble" was "unionism."

"Gentlemen here seem to be afraid to meet the real issue, but that is the real issue," he declared. "There is no use of sidestepping this matter. You are all afraid to say anything about the unions."

Replying, Senator Cummins declared that it ought to be a case of employees to strike when the government undertook to adjudge for them the justice of a dispute. He added that in his opinion this was a final remedy for such conditions as those now existing.

Recruits Plentiful.
Washington, August 24.—The shop and roundhouse forces of the Southern railway has been increased to 30 per cent of normal since the company began recruiting August 15 and now has 4,105 shopmen at work, Fairfax Harrison, president of the system, said in a statement issued here tonight. He added that "there seems to be no lack of candidates to fill the jobs."

"Since we began recruiting on August 15, the Southern railway system has every day added to its ranks and force it had in its shops and roundhouses and now has all told 4,105 shopmen at work. This is 36 per cent of a normal force, but, that is more important, there are now at work 20 per cent of a normal roster of skilled craftsmen. All new men are rigidly examined for mechanical ability before they are employed but there seems to be no lack of candidates able to pass the tests, especially since the failure of the last negotiations for settlement of the strike. More new men will be added every other day."

New Orleans, August 24.—Mayor Charles F. Gelboe, of Gretna, La., just across the river from this city, was indicted by a special grand jury in the United States district court here today, on a charge of interfering with guards on the trans-Mississippi Terminal Railway company's lines in violation of an injunction recently issued by the court.

The indictment charges that Mayor Gelboe "has attempted to obstruct, impede and hinder the due and lawful observance" of the trans-Mississippi company's injunction, rather than to "aid and assist in its enforcement."

It is also charged that the mayor recently attempted to cause the arrest of a deputy United States marshal on an "arrest" without the lawful observance" of the trans-Mississippi company's injunction, rather than to "aid and assist in its enforcement."

Birmingham, Ala., August 24.—Isaac Berry, of Inglenook, was shot through the leg and injured from the waist down by a bullet fired from a work at the Louisville and Nashville shops at Boyle. He was able to make his way back to his residence where medical aid was summoned only to find that he was dead, he stated to investigating officers.

Salisbury, N. C., August 24.—Fairfax Harrison, president of the Southern Railway, has sent his personal check for $1,000 as a contribution to a fund to relieve suffering and want upon the part of coal and rail strikers, according to officials of the railroad at Spencer and Salisbury.

In a letter accompanying the check received today Mr. Harrison declared he was "acutely conscious of the plight of women and children of the men who are electrically and mechanically winning and have nothing laid aside for the long pull."

Striking shopmen of the Southern railway at Spencer, standing pat for a national agreement and not a man of the 1,700 who left the shops on July 1 has left the ranks of the strikers, according to officials of the unions.

Picket work goes on unabated, though most of the clubs carried by the pickets a few days ago have disappeared. The picket line is now running full time and new recruits are being received daily, a contingent having arrived today. The railway officials claim the position is growing stronger daily and that the shops are rapidly filling with new men.

While trains are somewhat delayed, some instances of severe hours, the movement holds up well and all are making good time, according to railroad officials.

Severe companies of guardsmen are encamped three miles from Spencer while one company remains on guard duty in Salisbury at the Southern passenger station and at the postoffice where Sloop is employed.

BIG SPOT COTTON MARKET PLANNED

The advantage formerly possessed by Augusta in the matter of better railroad rates has been discounted in the readjustments of the last year.

The new rates enable Atlanta to compete with Memphis, one of the greatest inland cotton centers, and with the ports on the Gulf of Mexico.

The only real hindrance to the way of Atlanta's development as a great spot cotton market has been warehouse facilities. Mr. Tigner declared that with the opening of the Candler warehouse that handicap is overcome.

W. H. Glenn, president of the Shippers' Express company, lessors of the Candler warehouse, stated that arrangements had been made by the Cotton Storage and Finance company to use as much space in the warehouse as necessary to do a factor and merchandising business on a scale hitherto unequalled in Atlanta.

The cotton season in this section opens between September 1 and 10 and will be opening Atlanta will step out as one of the biggest bidders for the patronage of cotton buyers from the great textile centers of all sections of the United States and of Europe, he believes.

Warehouse at McPherson.
In addition to the 250,000 bale warehouse leased from the Candler interests, the Shippers' Express company operates a 25,000 bale warehouse near Fort McPherson. It began planning originally to build a 100,000 bale warehouse there but the leasing of the Candler warehouse, according to Mr. Glenn, made further building at that warehouse unnecessary at least for the present.

The Shippers' Express also operates a 60,000 bale warehouse formerly owned by the old Atlantic Compress company.

Other large Atlanta warehouses include the Thomas warehouse, 20,000 bales; Mangel's Georgia Warehouse company, 25,000 bales; Woodward Investment company, 10,000 bales; Cotton Warehouse company, 15,000 bales.

At the meeting of the board of directors of the Commercial Exchange Thursday when the cotton business prospects of Atlanta were discussed, seven of the eleven present were interested in the cotton industry. They were: J. Williams, cotton merchant; Robert A. Smythe, cotton broker; J. L. Vickery, cotton broker; W. A. Gilreath, cotton broker; J. R. Ellis, Jr., cotton merchant and broker; Henry Hillbrath, cotton merchant and broker; George S. Spier, cotton merchant. Other present were J. R. Buchanan, flour miller; W. J. Crosswell, merchant; George W. McCarty, fertilizer operator; and J. Hope Tigner, secretary of the exchange.

At the meeting Mr. McCarty was elected first vice-president of the exchange to succeed E. S. Ehney, deceased. W. A. Gilreath was elected treasurer to succeed H. E. Watkins, who has resigned and will leave Atlanta in September to go to New York to locate. Mr. R. Redwine was elected to the board of directors.

ports that the so-called "poison-pen" letters were to be investigated.

ASA G. CANDLER REFUSES TO DISCUSS RENO STORY.

Bishop Warren A. Candler, referred to in the Reno dispatches as responsible for the objections which have caused the postponement of the marriage between Mrs. De Bouchelle and Asa G. Candler, Sr., could not be reached by phone last night. His residence was called repeatedly during the evening but no one answered the phone.

Asa G. Candler, Sr., answered the phone when his residence was called, and the following conversation ensued:

"Mr. Candler, this is The Constitution. We are making a statement from Mrs. De Bouchelle in Reno that we would like to read to you."

"I don't care to hear it, thank you," and the receiver at his end of the line clicked.

COMBINE IN RACE FOR MAYOR DENIED

Chambers Asserts Sims Is Holding Both City and County Office—Nutting Issues Statement.

Charges of Walter Sims that a political ring is backing Chief Beavers, Councilman Nutting, and James G. Woodward, three of his opponents in the race for mayor, were denied emphatically by Aldine Chambers, of whom Sims had designated as head of the ring, and by Councilman J. R. Nutting, candidate for mayor, in statements issued Thursday following publication of a report of the speech in which Sims made the charges.

Aldine Chambers further charged that Sims is holding both a city and county office in defiance of law by acting at the same time as a member of city council and as attorney for the marshal of the municipal court of Atlanta at a salary of $100 per month.

In his speech at an eleven ward meeting at Faith's Crossing Thursday night, before a crowd of about 500 people at which twenty other candidates spoke, Councilman Sims did not discuss either the charges made by Chambers or the denial made by N. ting.

Sims Makes Speech.
Sims was the second speaker at the rally, following Chief Beavers. Beavers defended his own competency for the office he was seeking, declaring that he and his department recently were exonerated following charges of inefficiency, declared that he was unimpaired by any creed or religious affiliation and attacked the Ku Klux Klan, urging that it be forced to unmask.

Sims replied that as chief of police he had better opportunity to see the city than any other candidate and Beavers had better opportunity to see the city than any other candidate. He did not mention Chambers in connection with his assault on the alleged "ring."

Other Candidates Speak.
Nicholas Sowder, candidate for state superintendent of schools, Judge George E. Johnson and C. Don Miller, candidates for city recorder, G. W. Lindsey, for city warden; James R. Bachman, for alderman from twelfth ward; S. B. Florence, for tax collector; William A. Hampton, C. S. Roberts and Mr. Lottspeich, for superintendent of construction; Dr. Grace Kirkland, in behalf of Carl Hutchinson for superior court judge; Mr. Fitzgerald for Paul Etheridge; Paul Carpenter for his father's candidacy for council, and Councilman Murphy, whom Carpenter is opposing, also spoke.

Back of the Councilman J. R. Nutting replied to charges made by Councilman Sims Wednesday evening at a rally at Hemphill avenue and Tenth street.

Nutting Makes Reply.
Councilman Sims in his speech Wednesday night had charged Nutting with being an "obstructionist," and chambers with being the leader of a political "ring," which put Nutting, Beavers and Woodward into the race, and stated that the quartet met regularly at the police station.

"I have never in my life been present at a political conference attended by Chief Beavers, Mr. Woodward and Aldine Chambers, either at police headquarters or anywhere else," stated Nutting. "I have not visited police headquarters for any purpose during the past six months, and do not know how a single man or officer stands in the mayor's race."

Chambers Not Chairman.
"Aldine Chambers is not the chairman of my campaign committee, he is not even a member of the committee, he has no connection of any kind with the committee, and has nothing whatever to do with its work."

"If the Peachtree property owners paid me to Mr. Chambers or to any other lawyer to represent them before the finance committee, the money was absolutely thrown away, as the work would have been done just the same. Together with the other members of the finance committee I secured the original appropriation in 1921, and the work was completed during the present year as far out as North avenue. This widening was simply a continuation of the work begun about 10 years ago, in which original work I had a very active part."

"As a member of the ordinance committee and on the floor of council I have helped to kill quite a lot of foolish and unwise legislation, but I have had a hand in framing and passing probably more constructive legislation than almost any other member of council during the past 10 years."

"If a man is an obstructionist who protects the city's interests, who tries to see that the city gets value received for every dollar paid out and who assists in killing unwise and foolish legislation, I feel honored in being so denominated."

Chambers' Statement.
"If the people of Atlanta are simple enough to let Sims get away with the absurd statements he made Wednesday night, they deserve a better fate than to have Walter A. Sims for mayor," said Mr. Chambers, "and no greater calamity than this could befall them."

"I note that Sims said I was heading a ring putting out candidates against him. He knew these statements were not true when he made them."

"I moved out of the city in March 1921, and have been out of touch with municipal affairs since. I have not seen Mr. Nutting since he announced for mayor, I served in council with him several years ago, and consider him a capable man. I have only seen Chief Beavers one time since his announcement, and on that occasion he told me he had discussed his entry into the race with no one but his wife until his announcement was made."

"I served on the police board for three years and supported the wheels of fortune at the Lakewood fair. In this I did not consult him. Far any one to assert that I got these two men to run against each other is not only false, but is silly."

Uncle Jim Is Honest.
"I am not sufficiently intimate with Mr. Woodward to have discussed municipal affairs with him. Besides, I have not seen him for six months. But the average man you meet on the street will say: 'Well, you can say what you like about Uncle Jim, but he is honest.'"

Uncle Jim, but he is honest. The average man you meet on the street will not say this about Sims. On the contrary, the average man who knows him, will more than likely say: 'You'd better watch Walter, he's tricky.'"

"Sims says he investigated the police department. He knows he did not such thing. What he did was to use the police power of chief of police in a councilman investigating committee to coerce the solicitor-general into releasing on small bonds notorious thieves who were shrewd enough to employ him at the psychological moment. He accepted such employment while under instructions to investigate a controversy between the police department and the solicitor-general, when the latter had to do what Sims wanted done."

"I am so out of touch with political affairs that I only this week learned Sims, residing in DeKalb county, is drawing a salary of $100 per month from the treasury of Fulton county, and has been for the entire year as attorney for the marshal of the municipal court."

"Sims must have known when he accepted employment from those thieves that the law said a member of the general council should not defend a man charged with a crime in any case in which the city was interested or a city officer was prosecutor."

"Sims must also know that a man holding a position under the state government or any subdivision thereof, whether of honor, trust or emolument, is disqualified to sit in council."

This is the man who talks of enforcing the law."

Key Speaks in East Point.
A large crowd Thursday night heard an address at the city hall in East Point by Mayor Key, candidate for congress from the fifth district.

At the same hour, Jesse M. Wood, assistant city attorney of Atlanta, spoke at Bolton in the interest of Mayor Key's candidacy.

Mayor Key was introduced by Mayor McDuffie, of East Point. Supporters in that city of Key's candidacy have organized a "Key-for-Congress" campaign committee.

Mayor Key will speak Friday night at 7:30 o'clock in College Park. He spoke Wednesday in Douglas county.

Service Men Praise Sims.
Resolutions were passed Thursday by a group of Atlanta ex-service, vocational training men, endorsing the candidacy of councilman Walter A. Sims for mayor.

The resolutions stated that "Walter A. Sims is a real friend to those in need and has proved his friendship to ex-service men, having for the last two years had three ex-service men studying law in his office, and extending to them every courtesy and privilege, and giving them the benefit of his law knowledge and experience."

Harry York Unopposed.
Alvin L. Richards and Mallory Hunt announced Thursday their withdrawal from the race for councilman from the sixth ward, leaving Harry York in the field unopposed.

Mr. York is running on a platform pledged toward an endeavor to carry out the majority findings of the bunco committee. Richards and Hunt were said to be in sympathy with this issue, and on this account decided that a contest was unnecessary. Mr. York was manager of the old charter headquarters during the recent charter campaign.

TWO A. P. STATE CIRCUITS FORMED

Separate state circuits for Georgia and South Carolina were decided on yesterday at a joint meeting here of the Associated Press members from the two sister states. The Georgia circuit, day and night, will be filled out of Atlanta and the South Carolina circuit, day and night, out of Charlotte, N. C., temporarily.

The members assembled on the roof garden of the Ansley Hotel at 11 o'clock with Clark Howell, editor of The Constitution and a director of the Associated Press, presiding. He outlined the general plan of the Associated Press to provide improvements in the service to meet the wishes of the members and introduced U. J. McCall, Superintendent of the Southern division, and Milton Gargas, of New York, Chief of the Traffic Department of the Associated Press. They stated to the joint assembly the readiness and the desire of the Associated Press to ascertain their wishes and explained similar circuits which had just been voted by the members in Virginia and North Carolina.

Double Trunk Circuits. Double trunk circuits, day and night, from Washington and Chicago, the members were told, will provide the general news of the world and the United States for the distributing centers at Richmond, Charlotte and Atlanta which will relay to the state circuits. In addition, the regional news will be amplified and enlarged and will be supplemented by mail service from the various state capitals.

Mr. Howell, John S. Cohen, editor of The Journal, entertained the visiting newspaper men at luncheon at the Capital City club. After the luncheon the South Carolina members organized themselves into the South Carolina Association of the Associated Press and elected B. H. Peace, publisher of the Greenville News, as president. The Georgia members likewise formed themselves into the Georgia Association of the Associated Press and elected R. L. McKenney, news editor of the Macon News, as president.

Mr. McKenney brought forth applause from his colleagues when he stressed the value of the Associated Press to its members and urged them to realize that it was their Associated Press.

Mr. Howell, of the Constitution, Mr. Cohen, of the Journal, and Messrs. Julian Harris, of the Columbus Enquirer-Sun, Robert Lathan, of the Charleston News and Courier, George H. Koenig, of the Greenville News, and others made short talks.

Mr. Howell and Major Cohen were given a rising vote of thanks for their hospitality.

Shanks, the corps area commander. The citation is as follows: "Edward H. De Armond, lieutenant colonel, general staff corps, then brigadier-general, United States army. Features of the meeting will be an address by Superintendent Willis A. Sutton, of the Atlanta public schools, and solos by Miss Madeleine Hauff, accompanied by her father.

Brenner, one of the boys who attended the private schools of Atlanta before the opening of the public schools in January 1872, will be present at the meeting and will renew friendships that date back to the day prior to his departure for Spain 40 years ago. He has been living in Spain since that time.

CONVICT GUARD FILES $25,000 DAMAGE SUIT

For injuries received on August 10, when a truck in which he was riding was struck by a trolley car, J. J. Luck, a convict guard, asked $25,000 damages in a suit filed in superior court Thursday against the Georgia Railway and Power company. Attorneys Harwell, Fairman and Barrett filed the petition.

The Columbia river was named after the ship Columbia, whose crew discovered it.

Robert Predicts Business Boost For Next Year

Next year probably will be the most active business year from the standpoint of manufacturing development throughout the south that this section of the country has known, according to "Chip" Robert, president of Robert & Company, Atlanta architects and engineers.

Business is already considerably better—but a great many new enterprises which are planned are being held up on account of the uncertainty caused by the coal strike and the railroad strikes," said Mr. Robert. "Just as soon as these are definitely out of the way business will begin with a rush. Already throughout the country this condition is being reflected in the steady advance of building materials."

As an indication of the renewed activity in these lines, Mr. Robert announced the beginning of a $300,000 cotton mill development being made by the Entwistle Manufacturing company, at Rockingham, N. C., for which Robert & Company are now drawing the plans, and upon which construction will be begun probably by October 1. This plant will be an addition to the already large interests of this company near Rockingham. It will be designed to make print cloth.

"This development is an indication of renewed activity in textile lines which has just begun, and which will undoubtedly increase," declared Mr. Robert.

ARREST REVEALS MIDNIGHT FIGHT IN SODA STAND

A midnight fight Wednesday night between a soda dispenser and two men, who he says, were under the influence of whisky, came to light Thursday morning when O. B. Brock, soda clerk for Marshall's Pharmacy, took out assault and battery warrants against Harry Chesher, aged 21, of 853 Piedmont avenue, and Eugene Kibler, whose address was not given. Chesher was arrested before noon by City Detectives W. O. Bullard and W. F. Carter. It was stated Kibler had not been apprehended.

According to Brock, he was preparing to close the store for the night when the two men entered. While Kibler watched the door, it is alleged, Chesher attacked Brock and a lively scrap ensued. The man left the scene before assistance could be summoned, it is said.

VETO OF PENSION BILLS IS SCORED

Culpepper Says Veterans Should Have Been Given Money Voted Them by Previous Assembly.

Through the veto of the two confederate pension bills passed by the legislature at its recent session, the sum of $264,000 now is the state treasury to the credit of the old class of pensioners of 1922 will be taken from these veterans and turned over to form a part of the sum of $550,000 which will be paid to state institutions under special appropriation acts, according to a statement issued at the capitol Thursday by Representative Culpepper, of Fayette county, vice chairman of the house committee on appropriations and ways and means.

Representative Culpepper issued a statement to this effect following a conference held with Judge John Lindsey, commissioner of pensions. He further declared that this money is due the pensioners of the old class, which is composed of real confederate veterans and has nothing to do with the new class pensioners, which include widows of veterans. The total of the two appropriation bills was $1,200,000 for 1922 and $1,250,000 for 1923. The 1922 bill contained two sections, one appropriating $226,000 and the other appropriating $974,000. The $226,000 was appropriated to the "old class" pensioners and the $974,000 to the "new class" pensioners.

Was Past Due Money. It is stated by Representative Culpepper that the $264,000 which was due the veterans under the 1921 appropriation act and which is now in the treasury will now be diverted into other channels, most of it going to pay appropriations made to various state institutions at the recent session of the legislature.

Representative Culpepper's statement follows: "I regret very much that the governor saw fit to veto the appropriations for the old soldiers. As a matter of fact there is now in the state treasury a balance due the old class pensioners the sum of $264,000. This amount remains from the sum of $1,200,000 appropriated for this class of pensioners in 1921 as appears from a report of Commissioner Lindsey which was furnished the governor and the members of the legislature about July 1, 1922.

"The resolution vetoed by Governor Hardwick carried two appropriations, one for $226,000 for the so-called 'old class' due January 1, 1922, and the other for $974,000 for what are known as the 'new class,' due January 1, 1922, and at the time the governor vetoed this resolution there was in the treasury enough money belonging to the 'old class' of pensioners to pay the appropriation specified for them, namely, $226,000 and leave a balance of $38,200 in the treasury.

Could Have Split Veto. "In all fairness, since the governor has been vetoing one section of an appropriation bill that he thought without merit and approving other sections in the same bill, why didn't he approve the section in this resolution for $226,000 as the money was there in the treasury belonging to the needy and indigent pensioners? Then if he felt the $974,000 section for the 'new class' should be disapproved he could have vetoed it.

"Not only does he veto the whole amount of the bill but he is quoted as saying he expects to use the $264,000 which already belongs to the old soldiers, to pay certain other appropriations made by the legislature on the last night of the session which came over from the senate as an amendment to another appropriation measure.

"Certainly the governor did not treat the old soldiers fairly when he cut them off without an additional penny. And now he says he will use the money now in the treasury belonging to them to pay special appropriations which are not even statutory, while as a matter of fact the people of the state have voted the payment of pensions into their constitution and making such payment mandatory upon the legislature and the governor."

In the absence of Governor Hardwick, who spoke Thursday in Rabun county, no one at his campaign headquarters would make a statement in connection with Representative Culpepper's criticism of the pension veto.

Old Watson Attack. The Hardwick campaign headquarters, however, did comment on the exchange of telegrams between Senator Thomas E. Watson and Major Charles E. McGreggor, reported Wednesday by the Walker headquarters and made the following statement: "Two years ago, Senator Watson, in his paper, The Columbus Sentinel, made an analysis of the candidacy of Hon. Clifford Walker for governor. The analysis of Mr. Walker, written by Senator Watson, is as follows:

"'Cliff, you're making a wonderful ass of yourself; can't you quit doing it?'

"'Mr. Walker, you are a SOBRY LITTLE FELLOW; you went back on your friends and your principles—no far as you ever had any principles.'

"'Everybody knows you are against the people.'

"'If you don't know it, you are an unconscious dead limit.'

"'And when your real political character becomes known, Mr. Walker, no church will want you and no constituency will give you its vote.'

died. New duties and greater responsibilities fell upon Collins. The wedding was again postponed, and Thursday as Miss Kiernan passed at the door of the man whose name she had repeatedly shared, the nation bowed in sympathy.

Meantime word was received that Irish rebels had kidnapped John Collins, Michael's brother, during the day, but later released him. John Collins reported the rebels were gloating over the death of his brother.

Throgs in Tears. As Collins' body was borne into Dublin early Thursday morning on a gun carriage from the docks, throngs of men and women knelt weeping on the streets when the cortege passed.

As the processions of escort troops, with reversed arms, moved through the silent streets, the distant crack of the rifles of snipers, as they sought out one another, could be heard in the guerrilla warfare which Collins gave his life in endeavoring to end.

Richard Mulcahy has been named commander in chief of the free state army to take the place of Collins, and will fulfill the pledge to carry on to save Ireland. Mulcahy is slightly built and youthful in appearance. He is still in his thirties.

Mulcahy had been employed in the postal service. He left his job to take up arms in the rebellion of 1916. Later he began to study medicine, but abandoned his books when the splits came in the rebel ranks and his continuous presence with the army was required.

Great Military Organizer. Rising under Collins to minister of defense and chief of staff, his appointment as commander-in-chief may mean that the destinies of the Irish nation rest in his hands. It will be his task to conquer the rebels and press internal warfare, and consolidate the country in the lines of peace.

Mulcahy has not the flashing personality of Collins. Rather he is excessively modest and shy, but he is generally credited with having been a better military organizer than his chief, and having been the brains of the free state's defense. Collins had looked to him as a successor.

The youthful commander has a greater influence today with the rank and file of free state soldiers than any man in Ireland. Already there are joining him to avenge the death of Collins.

So Ireland, mourning the loss of another of those who have tried to unite her and bring an end to the long civil warfare, looks to the new leader to take up the fight where Collins dropped it and to carry out the pact made with his dead colleague.

by Sidney Howell and Brooks Hall, who following him to Mechanicville, N. Y., to a railway shop where Powell was working under the alias of W. W. Washington. He is said to have broken down and confessed to the killing, stating, according to the officers that he "was possessed with the devil at the time."

Feared Lynching. The negro pleaded with New York officials to electrocute him there in preference to sending him back to Georgia where he expressed fear of being lynched, according to stories printed in several New York newspapers. These clippings were brought back by the Early county deputies.

Deputy Sheriff Omar Howell had gone to the negro's home to serve a court paper on another negro whom the officer believed to be in Powell's home. The latter recognizing the deputy, is said to have thrown open the door to his home and fired three times, all three bullets striking the officer and killing him instantly. The negro immediately escaped and the search was begun by the brother of the dead officer and his father who is sheriff of Early county.

After tracing the negro to Florida, Sidney Howell claims he lost trace of the fugitive. Later he received an unsigned letter telling him that Powell was in New York working under an assumed name.

Leave for East. The slain man's brother accompanied by Deputy Brooks Hall, left Blakeley two weeks ago following receipt of the anonymous letter and went to Newark, N. J., where they were told the negro was employed. Arriving there they discovered their quarry had disappeared.

Undaunted, the two officers continued the investigation with the aid of New York detectives discovered the new whereabouts of Powell. Stationing themselves in the pay master's office last Monday, they waited until the negro was scheduled to draw his salary, they arrested him when he appeared in front of the window.

Powell is said to have immediately recognized the two Georgia deputies and dropping to his knees begged them to let him be electrocuted in New York, exclaiming "I'm guilty. The devil had me in his possession that day, and if I'm taken back there I'm shure to be hanged."

The two deputies, after leaving their prisoner in the Fulton tower early Thursday morning, spent most of the day at the Kimball house sleeping for the first time in 56 hours. They claim they were attacked at 11 o'clock Thursday night for Blakeley with the negro.

of the government bureau at Washington, and Senator Willis, an Ohioan, appealed to the convention, without success to insert some reference to the controversial legislation.

"This is a case of the indication of the sentiment in Ohio over the Harding executive accomplishments, regardless of the cordial expressions toward President Harding."

Pomeroy's Statement. Commenting on the action of the convention, Senator Albee Pomeroy today said to a representative of The Constitution:

"It is 26 wonder that the Ohio republican state convention did not mention the Fordyce-McCumber tariff bill. If there are any republicans in Ohio, outside of politicians, willing to approve this legislation, I have not discovered it."

"For three months I have received many, many telegrams and letters protesting against the high rates in the bill, and have been visited by a large number of Ohio business men, three-fourths of whom, I am certain, were republicans. For the convention to approve this bill by name would be like flaunting a red flag in their faces."

Concerning the fact of the convention to make mention of the subsidy bill, an administration measure sponsored by President Harding, Senator Pomeroy said:

"I think I can also understand why the republicans failed to mention the ship subsidy. A great many well-informed citizens favor a ship subsidy, but when it became known that the United States government was vigorously enforcing the prohibition laws within the United States, they were republicans. For the convention to approve this bill by name would be like flaunting a red flag in their faces."

Before we hit the coral we saw native men, clad only in loin cloths, pushing an outrigger canoe into the water, and with their assistance we made the shore in safety. If it had not been for the natives we probably would have lost our lives in the heavy surf."

Divorced by Wife Kills His Brother And Shoots Girl

Portland, Mich., August 24.—Returning from a long absence in Alaska and finding his wife had divorced him and married his brother, David, William Hughes made no attempt to emulate Enoch Arden. He killed his brother and, in attempting to kill his former wife, mortally wounded his daughter. He then turned the revolver on himself and died instantly.

Hughes returned from the north two months ago. When he found the changed conditions he at first evinced no resentment. David invited him to live in the Hughes home here and he accepted.

But, according to Mrs. Hughes, he daily became more morose and seemed to blame her, although he had left her for ten years.

Coming into the home Sunday and finding his former wife and his brother at dinner with his daughter, Gertrude, he became insanely jealous, Mrs. Hughes said. He rushed into a bedroom and got his revolver.

"I am going to kill the whole family," he shouted.

David Hughes struggled with him. "Bill, Bill, for God's sake; we are brothers," he pleaded.

William shot and David fell dead. The women ran from the house into the dark, screaming. The infuriated man shot in the dark and his daughter fell. The bullet had been aimed at his former wife, she believes. He then turned the gun on himself.

"William had been plotting to kill me ever since he came back," sobbed Mrs. Hughes. "I am sure he was. He then turned the gun on himself."

This meeting is to arouse Atlanta to the needs and desires of Morris Brown University. It is hoped to raise no less than $25,000 at this gathering. Come, enjoy yourself, hear some fine addresses, listen to the tuneful melody of 500 well-trained negro voices, and — THEN HELP

500 Voices
The best trained negro chorus in the south will sing spiritual songs, jubilees, and melodies in the negro's own native dialect, accompanied by the big organ.

Grand, Bigger and Better than the Chorus heard at the Billy Sunday meeting.

ALL YOU CAN FINANCIALLY. Pledges or cash will be acceptable.

Morris Brown University is an Atlanta institution. It was founded in 1881, and is manned and controlled by the leading and most able colored citizens of this city and section. It has no help—has had no help to speak of in the past—except from native negro citizens. It is owned by the African Methodist Church, which has spent a quarter of a million dollars in grounds, buildings and equipment here in Atlanta, and more than double that amount in maintenance, salaries, etc., practically all of which has come from the negro. This institution spends around $100,000 annually in Atlanta.

But Morris Brown needs help now to measure up to all its opportunities for the negro race. It is hampered for lack of buildings, equipment and campus; 600 boarding students have already been accepted, and as many more will apply. Many of those who apply may be disappointed.

Atlanta owes it to Morris Brown to help the trustees carry forward their great work of moulding men and women for future usefulness to Atlanta and Georgia.

All Atlanta—white and black—is asked to help in the work of raising at once $25,000. Come to the big mass meeting Sunday and help. You will enjoy it. One hundred invitations have been sent out, and accepted, to prominent citizens of Atlanta to sit upon the stage.

Ample accommodations have been made and plenty of seats reserved for whites

SEND MORE BRANTLEYS.

The communication of Representative A. P. Brantley, of Pierce, published elsewhere today, is so illuminating in the vital and well compiled information it contains as to fiscal affairs in Georgia, that every person should read it.

Assuredly the people of any state who spend as much as do Georgians for the non-essentials of life should be able to work out a satisfactory state fiscal system by which the state institutions might be adequately equipped and maintained.

And they would do so in Georgia
if they sent a sufficient number of such men as A. P. Brantley to the legislature.

The responsibility for writing
into the constitution of this state a revenue system that will be fair and just to all the people, without immunity or added burdens to any element, rests primarily with the general assembly. The people at the polls cannot vote upon a constitutional amendment unless the assembly
first submits it.

Just so the responsibility for the personnel of the assembly, the people's representatives who are to appraise the troubles and suggest and apply the remedies, rests with the voters.

There has been a woeful lack of wisdom in exercising both of these responsibilities, and the basic trouble is the assembly of Georgia, as we find it in recent years, is not composed of a sufficient number of business men who measure up to the standard of the representative from Pierce county.

There are a great many counties,
large and small, that send able and efficient men to the assembly—men who are capable of mastering the state's financial difficulties just as they have mastered their own affairs and made successes of them;
but of the 257 members of the assembly the fact stands out with shameful boldness that a majority of them are men who are incapable of managing successfully so much as a commissary at a crossroads labor camp.

The voters are not altogether to blame. The annual session, breaking for fifty days every summer into a business man's private affairs, keeps scores of successful and progressive citizens all over the state from offering for the assembly, and especially while it is controlled apparently by a majority of professionals and irresponsibles, thereby destroying the opportunity for good results that would otherwise ensue.

If Georgia would follow the lead of every other state in the union except four, and discard the annual session, then the professional legislator would have to find him a job
—if nothing else than working as section-hand in a maintenance crew
—and then more men of the business force of A. P. Brantley would offer for the assembly—and Georgia would crawl out of the hole.

Georgia has a number of able men in both the senate and house,
and they are fully capable of revising the system of state finances satisfactorily to everybody, but they are helpless, for they are far in the minority.

The Washington Post says that
"the announcement by physicians that we don't drink enough water sounds as if they were libeling the hoochmakers."

A man whose wife has been elected sheriff of a western county says that that may be what is called
"The New Freedom," but he thinks it's high time to make his last will and testament.

The Albany Herald says that distinct improvement in the country school systems in that section of Georgia has been noted in recent

MUSCLE SHOALS AGAIN.

The interesting question as to whether a president has a legal right to divert funds appropriated by congress for specific purposes may arise from a discovery that $500,000 of an unexpended balance of $1,400,000 appropriated during the Wilson administration for work at Muscle Shoals has been used by the agricultural department, by order of President Harding.

The remaining $900,000 of that fund is undoubtedly available for the restored operations, as the work was resumed by order of congress, but Secretary Weeks has asked of the president whether or not he may have permission to use it in the Muscle Shoals operations.

The question naturally arises, to what extent can even a president of the United States, in times of peace, go toward diverting appropriations from one department to another?

If he can do so at will, what's the use of a budget system, and what's the use of differentiated appropriations? Why not turn over about five billions of dollars every year to the white house, drawn from the people by tax tolls and tariff duties, and tell the executive, whoever he may be, to run the government and foot the bills as he sees fit?

The trend of the federal government is too much toward an autocracy, and the quicker congress
gives more thought to state's rights and less thought to federalizing everything, and then concentrating federal authority in one man, or a close party corporation, the better it will be for the people and the better it will be for congress.

As to Muscle Shoals, the republican congress made a serious mistake in stopping work on it, especially when the government already had the money in hand to continue the work until further appropriations could be made.

Simply because it was begun under a democratic administration, the newly enthroned republican party discredited the democratic party and the war administration, only to admit subsequently that it was the most constructive undertaking made by this government in generations.

As a result, however, of the political game that was staged at the expense of the Muscle Shoals program, and lost, the property has deteriorated in two years to an extent that it will take practically all of the old fund, even if the president permits its use, to put it back in the shape it was when congress had the work stopped. That is a concrete example of some of the economies instituted by the party that is now in power.

There will be available in October $7,500,000 total, to be disbursed in units, to carry the original Muscle Shoals project on as originally contemplated while Mr. Wilson was president.

This was made by recommendation of republican leaders in congress who investigated the whole project for months and who fought as hard as they could afford to sustain the party's action in stopping work and denouncing the whole thing.

Whether Henry Ford ever gets this plant, or whatever may be its future usefulness to the farmers of the country as a source of nitrates,
the one fact remains that the Wilson administration has not only denied the exigencies of war had not demanded it, but the republican party, which sought to discredit it, has completely reversed its original position, and has admitted its mistake to the whole nation—almost in humility.

A COUNTRY DINNER.

A sign displayed by an old-time linemaker furnished James Whitcomb Riley with the theme for one of his inimitable poems.

The sign read: "Come in and get some coffee like your mother used to make."

At least, so Riley wrote of it—setting the "homey," hearty invitation to music.

It recalls also the more ancient legend of the "biscuits" the motherly homekeepers "used to make,"
and the plain country dinners that made for health and happiness.

Such invitations attract the attention of the hungry traveler of today, just as they did of old, and he halts wherever one may confront him.

It is like a home-call to dine at Plenty's table, where grace thanks
the Lord "for all these blessings."

There are country-lands in Georgia,
as many well-planned tourists
attest, where the tables may be said to "groan with the weight of the feast," and the savory, plain dishes
make one feel instantly at home.

Writing of one of them particularly,
a Georgia tourist says—
"We stopped for dinner. And such a dinner! The table was so crowded with old-time cooking that it didn't seem possible to get another dish on it; and yet the smiling hostess said, apologetically, to our party: 'I wish I had known you folks were coming. I would have been better prepared for you.'"

One couldn't help but feel at home under such circumstances, and no doubt there wasn't one in that hungry party that didn't feel like saying grace and also thanking God afterward, for good measure.

When you come to think it over,
it's a mighty good state and country
to live in.

Prominent Business Man Tells "What's Matter" With State

Editor Constitution: After spending fifty days in Atlanta as a member of the legislature one could not help becoming naturally interested in the financial condition of the state. One heard on all sides of the desperate situation of the farmers of this state. Large county taxes, the sale of 500 farms during 1921—largely county taxes, of course.

An afraid that all the people who live in this state do not understand the recent hardness of the average farmer and are not, therefore, using their talents in an effort to help this important class of our population. The main money crop of Georgia has been farming. The state now is certain. The farmer may do his full share of the crop and be ruined in one season through the ravages of the weevil. On the other hand, if there was no weevil, doubtless so much cotton would be produced it would not sell in times like these for what he got for the cost of production.

There is an under-consumption shown in the world of nearly all farm products. The reason for this is well known and need not now be discussed. We are bound to have less of our farm products than we had in the past. The farmer is cut down to the point that no more will be produced than is actually required by the world. Educational work along this line is very much needed.

The Georgia State Farm, which was started in 1921 at $100,000,000 from the value of the same products in 1920 and
about $200,000,000 from the value of the same products in 1919. Farm products in 1920 and 1921 did not sell for more than half the cost of production and this, of course, the immediate
cause of the hard times in the agricultural section of the state. The Georgia
State Farm is probably the hardest in Georgia
from the fact that it is still in operation
during the year mentioned. While in the past the products of the farm bring about the year to pay the cost of production.

In order to get a better perspective of the real situation in Georgia let us examine a few items of income and output in 1921.
Below are figures furnished by the Department of Markets showing the value of all farm products grown in Georgia in 1921.

	1921	1920
Corn (all)	4,925,000	3,707,000
Wheat (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Oats (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Hay (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Peas (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Beans (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Apples (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Oranges (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Peaches (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Almonds (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Walnuts (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Sticks (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Maples (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Summers (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Walnuts (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Almonds (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Peaches (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Apples (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Beans (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Peas (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Oats (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Wheat (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000
Corn (all)	1,350,000	2,580,000

Total 10,705,000 $100,000,000
Of course everyone knows that the farmer cannot live on what he produces and he does not convert into cash his entire crop.
It will be admitted that the farmer's crops have not been cashed, but these are largely counted, as is even. It will be noticed that the figures total $100,000,000 less $100,000,000. From this must be deducted $200,000,000 for fertilizers in 1921
and $140,000,000.

Turning to a few items of output I find that the Georgia State Farm, which was started in 1921 at $100,000,000 from the value of the same products in 1920 and
about $200,000,000 from the value of the same products in 1919. Farm products in 1920 and 1921 did not sell for more than half the cost of production and this, of course, the immediate
cause of the hard times in the agricultural section of the state. The Georgia
State Farm is probably the hardest in Georgia
from the fact that it is still in operation
during the year mentioned. While in the past the products of the farm bring
about the year to pay the cost of production.

It does seem, however, strange that the people of Georgia can pay without protest the enormous taxes levied on them. The people of Georgia are spending for cigarettes, for other items like cigarettes, cigars, etc., a sum of money running into millions of dollars. The state is a very large state and the state is a very large state and the state is a very large state.

BITS OF NEW YORK LIFE

BY O. O. MINTYRE

On the Atlantic, August 24.—I sing today of the steerage. Just as the Bower to me is the most interesting place in New York, so is the steerage
the most picturesque spot aboard ship. To find romance and color one must descend to the bowels of the great hulk of iron and steel.

Here one finds the medley of all races. And all are on equal footing.
No special honors. No regal suites.
The bunks and the food fare are all the same. The old Turk puffs at his narghile. The Chinaman smokes his long thimble pipe. The women eat and rock sucking babies.

In our steerage 300 Russians, driven into Canada by the religious prejudice of the last czar, are going home again. They have prospered and their number has grown to 10,000. If those who return are well treated the rest will follow to till the soil and help restore their stricken land.

There are those who snatched at the golden dream in America and missed. There are others who have succeeded to their lights, succeeded and are going home, to live in plenty.
Through the air vents in the morning and evening the upper deck passengers can hear them sing and sing.
Even the bruised and beaten are happy going home again.

One old man who wears black whiskers, a flat top derby and long alpaca coat sleeps all day and all night he stands at a porthole gazing
at the stars and mumbling his lips.
At times he kneels and lifts his clasped hands in supplication. He has talked to no one.

Two babies have been brought into the world down in the steerage since the ship left New York. Births are not unusual there and life goes on serenely. Most of the men wear overalls and blue shirts open at the throat and go barefoot, for it is very hot.
Morning and night the steerage is washed and scrubbed with a solution of chlorine and it is clean and comfortable. The captain visits it every day. A Slav passenger has an accommodation and at sunset they dance folk and square dances.

I notice that as we near Cherbourg, France, the stewards who will extend their itching palms there and at Southampton are growing very solicitous, although I must say they have been very courteous all the way across.
One insisted today on reading me a joke from "Punch."

Today I discovered an old and valued New York friend on the ship.
It was his first appearance on deck since we left the Cunard pier. He was a little wobbly and when a waiter came up with a cup of broth as we were talking, the way he waved him away is nobody's business. He says he has a bright new ocean slogan.
It is "Narrower and Calmer Oceans."

It was great fun watching the dancers in the ball room at the tea event. The ship was rolling furiously and as the dancers were scooted across the floor they would reach out and grab new partners. One young lady was forced to grab the orchestra leader and she was a good sport for she made him dance around with her. He proved to be the best dancer on the boat and they got much applause.

The favorite youngster aboard is Fifi, a bright eyed, dark haired little French girl of seven and a half years.
Fifi is a French war orphan who was adopted by a wealthy Chicago family.
She has her governess and each afternoon she goes down in the steerage to play with the children down there.
She plays with the children down there for a half hour. She takes fruit and candy with her which she distributes.
(Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution.)

Another puzzling thing about the movies is the arrangement of the you crawl over a fat man to reach the only vacant seat.

"Four-score years and ten." The "four score" refers to the number of years. The "ten" refers to the number of goat glands.

Whatever it is that makes a man
tell his story forty times, it isn't a sense of humor. Or any other kind of sense.

It is easy to avenge yourself on the speed cop. Just confess that you really were speeding and the shock will kill him.

Nearly every community has a church that contains most of the wealth and culture of the town and very little of its religion.

When you see her photographed
with one foot raised high in the air,
you can't tell whether she's a chorus girl or a high jumper.

Georgians May Find a Remedy in Commission Government

(From The Columbus Ledger.)
That the state of Georgia is in a very bad fix, financially, is known by most people, but few had any idea that there was a possibility of the outstanding deficit being reduced to a mere $200,000 by the first of the coming year.

Under caption "What's the Matter with Georgia?" The Atlanta Constitution says in part:
The closed record of the Georgia legislature for 1921-22 is not an enviable one.
"It found the treasury facing a deficit of about $3,000,000 on January 1, 1922;
it left it facing a deficit of about $5,000,000
on January 1, 1923."

Other Georgia newspapers are pointing out the state's predicament and many according to the columns because of their doing-ness and the latter noted the scattering, but we don't hope for a remedy in this way, only as it may arouse the people to the importance of action at the polls.

The Ledger desires to offer a suggestion for a remedy in the form of commission government for the state. This practical, business-like plan of government has been tried and found not wanting in near eight hundred American cities and it has been clearly demonstrated that it is the best land. It is by no means an experiment, many cities and counties having been successfully operated under this more progresive plan of government for years and years and records will be paid to the state as a city or county ever gone back to the old and cumbersome plan after trying the new and modern—the practical business form of government.

Here in Columbus the first six months under commission government, showing a saving of over $100,000, there is ample evidence to convince all of the merits of this plan. Many cities and counties showing the same results. The plan is being used in many other cities and counties where business is taking the place of politics in city halls and the people are getting 100 cents out of each dollar instead of 90 cents as at present.

In Georgia there are twelve congressional districts. The Ledger would suggest a commission of one dozen strong business men—one to be named from each district—to be elected by the people. Each salary large enough to attract the very best talent to be found. Let the governor be head of the commission, or chairman, as the mayor of city, etc., etc. Let the twelve be elected for different periods, so that there will be always a working force familiar with the state's affairs to "live-over."

Why, this would be revolutionary, one would say—and many think. Perhaps such a change in the government of a great commonwealth would be a bit revolutionary—just as was the case in Columbia. However, the situation is tense. Georgia is in a serious and drastic, or revolutionary, treatment must be applied as a means of keeping us away from bankruptcy.
We have just about gone our limit and something must be done.

IS URIC ACID RHEUMATISM?
Yesterday I received, as I suppose thousands of other doctors did whose names happen to appear in the medical Who's Who, a generous free sample of the latest imported panacea
and pain killer, a coaltar derivative, of course; and according to the industrial distributor of the dope in this country it is good for "rheumatism, neuritis, gout, headache, neuralgia, migraine, eyestrain, sciatica, etc." The "etc." is the typical dope word to stimulate uric acid excretion invariably an "etc." at the end of the list of pains and aches a coaltar derivative is associated with—by the people of the dope.

This particular heart depression,
blood destroying coaltar derivative is authoritatively credited with the power to stimulate uric acid excretion an effect which it may be granted without argument. But the outfit selling the stuff to the physicians of the country—or rather using the physicians as unpaid agents for popularizing the mixture—run wild and add to the uric acid eliminating effect some others which are as fanciful as the wings of the angels, such as these:
"Relieves pain, stiffness, inflammation and congestion with remarkable promptness, while reducing to a minimum the possibility of injurious, or undesirable by-effects." The peculiar construction and wording of the foregoing will immediately strike any student as typically central European. The special therapeu-

TWO ARRESTS MADE IN STRIKE DISORDER

Warrants charging Robert B. Bogart, of 50 Lindsey street, and Sam Shockey, who resides near Inman yards, with violation of the interstate commerce laws, in connection with the attack last Monday on 10 negro employees of the Southern railway, were served early Thursday morning on the two men by United States deputy marshals following a three-hour grilling of Bogart earlier in the night.

The arrest of the two men was the culmination of an intensive investigation of a large number of persons, including several street car operators of the Georgia Railway & Power company and others said to have witnessed the outbreak, conducted under the personal direction of United States District Attorney Clint W. Hager.

Bogart was served with a summons about 10 o'clock Wednesday night to appear before the district attorney. He was subjected to a three-hour questioning and is said to have been identified by witnesses as one of the gang of 25 strikers who shot at the negroes. In the encounter Etheridge Hopkins, one of the negroes, was shot in the back and is said to be in a dying condition at Grady hospital.

In charging Bogart and Shockey with violation of the interstate commerce act, District Attorney Hager stated that any interference with movement of mails and trains came under that statute. In the event the wounded negro dies, it is intimated the two men will be charged with murder. They are being held in the Fulton county jail.

Southern Adds New Men.
Washington, D. C., August 24.—(Special.)—Fairfax Harrison, president of the Southern railway system, said today:

"Since we began recruiting on August 15, the Southern railway system has every day added to the skeleton force it had in its shops and roundhouses and now has all told 4,153 shopmen at work. This is 36 per cent of a normal force, but what is more important, there are now at work 20 per cent of a normal force of skilled craftsmen. All new men are rigidly examined for mechanical ability before they are employed, but there seems to be a normal rate of dates able to pass the tests, especially since the failure of the last recruitment for settlement of the strike. More new men will be added every day."

Newer Form of Iron Quickly Increases "Pep" Strength and Energy

"You cannot be well and strong and full of vigor, force, and power unless your blood is rich in iron," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician Bellevue Hospital, (Outdoor Department), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital. "It is your red blood that enables you to resist and overcome disease, and that nourishes every organ in your body. Without iron your blood becomes thin, pale, and watery. Poor blood cannot nourish your vital organs, and as a result you may have pains in your heart or kidneys, indigestion, headaches, and feel all run-down and tired-out. When your blood lacks iron do not waste your time taking stimulating medicines or narcotics, but directly enrich your blood with the newer form of iron sold by Nuxated Iron, which is like the iron in spinach, lettuce, and apples, and is in a form easily assimilated into your blood."

Get a bottle of Nuxated Iron today. Take it for two weeks and if you have not, like thousands of others, the most refreshing health, strength and energy, the manufacturer will promptly refund your money. ## SPECIAL SCHOOL TAX DECLARED ILLEGAL

The Georgia supreme court in a decision handed down Thursday held that a school tax levied to increase its school levy of five mills maximum unless an amendment to the state constitution is voted by two-thirds of the taxpayers providing for the increase is illegal.

The decision was based on an appeal from Irwin county in which taxpayers of that county sought a writ of injunction to prevent a school tax levy of seven and one-half mills from being imposed.

According to briefs in the case L. R. Tucker, county commissioner of Irwin county, attempted to collect and did collect from a number of taxpayers money on increased school tax assessments. Efforts were made to restrain the tax collector from collecting funds above the maximum five mills as prescribed by the state law, on the ground that the law is unconstitutional unless an amendment to the state constitution is voted by two-thirds of the taxpayers providing for the increase.

TOOMBS DuBose Says He Believes Governor Erred in Vetoing Bill

Following Governor Hardwick's veto of the bill appropriating $34,000 for the school for mental defectives, Wednesday, because of alleged errors in its contents, a statement was made Thursday in Athens by Representative Toombs DuBose, of Clarke county, who was said to be the author of the bill, denying that he drew the bill and claiming it was drawn by the office of the attorney general and introduced by him at the request of Dr. Abernethy.

Mr. DuBose stated that the 1922 bill which was passed by both houses of the general assembly, did not carry an appropriation feature but simply amended the caption of the previous bill carrying $25,000 for 1922 and 1923 with the latter year embodied in the caption but omitted in the contents of the bill.

No appropriation could, therefore be made, he stated, "until the correct bill was made, and I believe Governor Hardwick acted under a misapprehension when he vetoed the bill."

The governor maintained that if he should approve the bill it would have no legal effect on the school because, the bill, as presented to him, is meaningless, he stated.

BUSINESS TO IMPROVE, SAYS ROBERT GREGG

Declaring that the steel industry is a safe barometer as to conditions generally, Robert Gregg, president of the Atlantic Steel company, told the Atlanta Advertising club at the luncheon of the club Thursday at the chamber of commerce dining hall that business is certain to improve within the next few months.

"Although many economists seem to unite in the opinion that we are faced with a long period of declining prices, I see nothing but prosperity ahead. The outlook in the steel industry is bright, brighter than it has been for some time. For the first time in two years our plant has been put on a capacity output, and we are turning business away. This does not mean simply that this one concern is doing business; it indicates that business is regaining a sound footing."

"And another thing that spells surge in the business world is the fact that the farmer is again coming into the market. With the harvesting of the crop this year, the farm lands will be relieved and banking circles will experience a great relief," said Mr. Gregg.

Resignation of Rev. James S. Goodwin, pastor of the Confederate Avenue Baptist church, Thursday ended a litigation which has stirred the congregation for two weeks. The pastor announced in Fulton superior court that he will resign and surrender the church keys to the board of trustees.

A petition to enjoin the minister from continuing as pastor of the church was filed recently by several trustees, who allege that he was no longer their pastor. He charged the move to his refusal to permit disavowal of the church.

Judge W. D. Ellis ordered that a vote be taken to determine if the members desired to retain him as pastor. The vote showed 31 ayes with none noes.

When the vote was reported to the court, the anti-Goodwin faction declared that they had not been given sufficient notice of the election. Judge Ellis then appointed a new pastor and adjourned the court. Affidavits stating their willingness for the pastor to resign and to have been secured from 40 members.

After paying a fine of $150 in re a court order Wednesday morning on a charge of disorderly conduct in connection with events alleged to have taken place in a house on Calhoun street, Jordan was asked by the committee on charities and health, through Mayor Luther Williams, yesterday to resign.

About the time that he was pending his resignation, which had not been received by the mayor last night, the grand jury indicted him on a charge of carrying a pistol in violation of the licensing of John ("Cockey") Glover.

Besides indicting Jordan, the grand jury yesterday afternoon returned two other indictments, one against J. Ellis Bryant, clerk in a dry goods store, and N. N. Parks, soft drink merchant.

CHURCH BATTLE ENDED WHEN PASTOR RESIGNS

Resignation of Rev. James S. Goodwin, pastor of the Confederate Avenue Baptist church, Thursday ended a litigation which has stirred the congregation for two weeks. The pastor announced in Fulton superior court that he will resign and surrender the church keys to the board of trustees.

A petition to enjoin the minister from continuing as pastor of the church was filed recently by several trustees, who allege that he was no longer their pastor. He charged the move to his refusal to permit disavowal of the church.

Judge W. D. Ellis ordered that a vote be taken to determine if the members desired to retain him as pastor. The vote showed 31 ayes with none noes.

When the vote was reported to the court, the anti-Goodwin faction declared that they had not been given sufficient notice of the election. Judge Ellis then appointed a new pastor and adjourned the court. Affidavits stating their willingness for the pastor to resign and to have been secured from 40 members.

In far eastern countries the use of forks is still unknown.

AT WOMAN'S WINDOW

BY W. L. GEORGE

I suppose that it is a sad criticism upon male kind that a woman often hesitates as to whether she will marry this man or not, while she hesitates so little when the person in question is a servant. That one she takes, which is quite sensible, since in this world there are more husbands than servants, and it is no use laughing at me for a woman desires with her help as permanent a union as she does with her husband. A really good servant she would like to keep for life, and it takes much more to drive a woman to Reno in regard to her cook than in regard to the one who pays the cook's wages.

All the same many women do not make the best of such help as they can get. In these days most servants are untrained, but most servants are some good, and they are just about as good as the mistresses they have. Strictly speaking a woman has the help she deserves. It is quite a wrong idea to introduce into the house a total stranger and to maintain her as such. If a woman is going to get on with her servant, she can do it only on the lines of humanity. It is not enough to allow the maid the freedom for which she contracted. She wants more. She wants affection, interest in her affairs, sympathy with her pleasures; she wants to feel essential; in other words, lost as she is among strangers, she wants to recover a sort of family. If servants do not attach themselves to their masters, it is because their masters do not attach themselves to them. A woman should know something of her servant's affairs, what are her parents, where they live, what they are, what they are planning, who her lover is, what are his chances, where she can help them. Humanity and sympathy with servants as with others. It is always the same thing.

GREEN FLIES AND FEARS

"Fear is implanted in us as a preservative from evil, but its duty, like that of other passions, is not to overbear reason but to assist it. It should not be suffered to tyrannize over the imagination, to raise phantasms of horror, or to beset life with superhuman distresses."—Johnson.

This is the tale of a little girl and a green fly. Maybe you do not see how Samuel Johnson could have anything to do with a little girl and a green fly, but he really could.

The little girl belongs to a neighbor of mine. She is by nature a nervous, fearful little girl, the kind of child who is afraid of thunderstorms and cows and the dark, and who never needs to be warned not to go too deep into the water or not to pat strange dogs.

Just a Hateful Fly.

The green fly was just a green fly, of the same pervasive, fibred personality as the rest of his ilk.

The little girl and I were sitting together out doors when the green fly buzzed around us and bit me. The little girl got up; "I think I'd better be going in the house," she said.

"Why?" I asked.

"I'm afraid that green fly might bite me," she said. "My aunt told me she knew a little girl and a green fly bit and she was awfully sick and when she got well she couldn't walk by herself and had to go around on crutches for years. Oh, there he is again. I think I'd better go right into the house."

And she went.

Fears and More Fears.

Poor little girl! To think that when by nature she has far more than her share of fears she should have to have more implanted in her by her family. When she should be helped to cultivate courage and unconcern, how dreadful to fill her mind with more anxieties.

Of course one understands the state of mind of those who have children, they long to warn them of all dangers and set them as much as possible on their guard.

But there is a danger that way, too, especially to the nervous, timorous child.

I know a woman who with her first baby was so anxious that he should not take cold that she always covered him too warmly. When the doctor protested she said, "But isn't it better to put on extra blanket on him than to run any risk of his taking cold?"

No Extreme Safe.

"Decidedly not," said the doctor. "There are just as many risks that way as the other. He may get hot and sweaty and throw off the blankets in his sleep and catch cold that way, or he may just get more sensitive to cold so that he will always be taking cold. The thing to do is to cover him just enough; not too much either."

Is there not an analogy in that? We think we will be on the safe side and warn and restrict too much instead of too little. But is it the safe side? Isn't one as bad as the other? May we not make him so rebellious he will throw off all restraint all his life from apprehensiveness and anxiety?

Woman's Club Scholarships Are Announced Today

Mrs. Wilmer Moore has at her disposal one full scholarship in each of the following schools: Washington Seminary, North Avenue Presbyterian school, Marietta college, Southern Shortland and Business university, Riverside Military Academy at Gainesville, Ga., and Mrs. Merrill M. Hutchinson's school of oratory, one-half scholarship at Crichton's Business college, two half scholarships at Miss Woodberry's school, and one correspondence course in machine shop work with the International Correspondence school of Scranton, Pa.

Students desiring the benefits of these scholarships should make application at once as the fall terms open on September 5 and time must be allowed for proper references as to the student's earnestness of purpose and need of assistance. Two indentments are necessary. Application should be made to Mrs. Wilmer Moore or to the members of her committee. These members are Mrs. A. O. Woodward, Mrs. J. W. Awtry, Mrs. Shepard Bryan, Mrs. Maud Barker Cobb, Mrs. W. J. Poole and Mrs. T. T. Stevens, member ex-officio, as chairman of the department of applied education.

Mrs. T. T. Stevens should be consulted in cases where the above scholarships do not fill the particular need of the ambitious student, as owing to her connection with various educational enterprises she is frequently able to put the student in touch with the desired educational opportunity.

THE HOME IN GOOD TASTE

By Harold Donaldson Kierlein
Joint Author of "Practical Book of Interior Decoration," Etc.

No. 61. Windsor Chairs.

There is one kind of chair that originated in Queen Anne's time that has held its own in popular favor ever since then and is still as much in demand and as suitable for varied uses as at any time during its long career. It is the "Windsor chair."

Chairs of this type form a distinct class by themselves, and though many variations in structure and appearance occurred from time to time, there is never any mistaking the family resemblance. These variations in type have been so numerous and so interesting that not a few people have made a hobby of collecting them, in almost the same way as one would set out to collect postage stamps or autographs. The two distinguishing characteristics of Windsor chairs by which they may always be known are the slender turned legs, splayed outward from the seat to the floor, and connected by slender turned stretchers; and the backs, composed of a number of slender turned spindles set close together. The seats are of wood. The backs of the early Windsor chairs, made in Queen Anne's time, are hooped, as in the cut. These early Windsors also often had a central pierced splat instead of the middle spindles.

DRESS BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

French Designers Are Determined to Continue Organdies as Decoration for All Kinds of Clothes, But They Have Given a Novel Twist to It By Embroidering It in Bright Colors.

Paris.—Two features of decoration are continued in the clothes of the present. One is organdie; the other is cravat. Yes, there's another. It's the heavy Indian or Persian twist that goes around the waist, the head

One young woman at Aix wore hats of this kind, on which the taffeta bow had twisted loops that ran parallel with her cheek bones. She continually pulled them forward when she wasn't occupied with pulling her ear locks forward. Isn't it strange that these same mannerisms go on with all young women no matter what language they speak?

"A debutante is a girl who sits and waits and never stops pulling her ear locks forward," said a Princeton sophomore.

The hat of gray suede, with a pale mauve decoration, is the kind the French wear from border to border. I have seen it from Aix to Etretat. Its chief feature is that it carries its bow behind.

And you can usually find women in the shops in August buying a few shirtwaists that they would not have thought of buying earlier in the summer, so sure were they that they would have their clothes wanted and supplied with separate frocks.

But gingham frocks fade and shrink, veils frocks sag and the crispness comes devastatingly from the organdie. The problem of having these things washed is not easy. We begin to hanker after the separate blouse that can be sent to the laundry without faint heart.

To be sure the shirtwaist costume gives us less opportunity to display individual taste, but there is a compensating wearableness about it that somehow compensates.

So you may find that though when you went off for that little week's sitting in June you carried a trunkful of wash frocks, for the later outing you are planning to take the end of August or the first of September, you are going to wear as many blouses as there are days to be spent, two separate skirts, and a sweater or two and let it go at that.

From many summer resorts word has come that separate blouses were enjoying much popularity. At one very smart summer colony there has been a revival of interest in manish blouses made from heavy wash silk.

THE IRREPRESSIBLE SHIRT-WAIST.

Did you ever notice that sooner or later as the summer progresses—usually later—the women you know become interested in shirtwaists, or separate blouses of some sort, as a substitute for the one-piece "summer frock."

And you can usually find women in the shops in August buying a few shirtwaists that they would not have thought of buying earlier in the summer, so sure were they that they would have their clothes wanted and supplied with separate frocks.

HOW TO SAVE WHEN SHOPPING

By Ruth Leigh

Author of "The Human Side of Retail Selling," "The A B C of Retailing," Etc.

Cotton goods are so cheap and plentiful that some housewives think there are no adulterations or deceptions practiced on this material. Frequently, however, cotton is artificially dressed or misrepresented in other ways. Here are some tests for good cotton: First, examine the fiber. The individual cotton fiber is short and wavy. Then you can tell good cotton by the feel. It is quite characteristic, once you become familiar with it.

Cotton tears easily with a shrill sound, and the ends of the fiber curl up and are fuzzy. That is an almost infallible test for good cotton. Tearing will also show you if the material has been sized (starched), for the presence of sizing will appear as a cloud of dusty particles. Washing will remove the sizing, leaving the material without any body and showing loosely woven cloth of a poor quality.

You will find that cotton burns with a flash, leaving just a little gray ash. The odor is that of burning leaves.

With such simple tests there is really no excuse for buying poor or adulterated cotton goods.

An interesting, practical talk tomorrow about buying good snapfasteners. What woman is not interested in the subject?

The Hills of Han

BY SAMUEL MERWIN

Next Week, "The Beloved Traitor"
By Frank L. Packard

Elmer Boatwright's chin sagged a little way. For a long moment he stood motionless, making no sound. Slowly Doane's giant figure stirred, straightened up, came slowly into the room; closed the door, leaned back against it.
"It—it is you?"
"Yes." It was plainly an effort for Doane to speak.
"You're wounded?" Boatwright was quite incoherent. "Here—take my bed! How did you ever get in?"
Doane lowered himself painfully to the bed. "Betty is here?"
"Betty? Oh, yes! We're all safe."
"Where is she?"
"I—I don't know exactly."
"You don't know?"
"Why... Madame Pourmont has been caring for her."
"You mean that she is ill?"
"No, Oh, no! One moment. But you must have attention at once. Dr. Mary Cassin is right here—and my wife." The little man moved to the door. "You must have had a terrible time."
"They left me for dead at the Hung Chan gate. I crawled to the house of a convert. As soon as I felt able to travel I started, walking at night, hiding by day. I must see Betty."
"But not like this," the little man blurted out.
Doane's eyes wandered down over his muddy tattered clothing.
"I'll call the others first," said Boatwright.
Soon Dr. Cassin came in, greeted Griggsby Doane with a warm hand-clasp, and at once examined his shoulder. Boatwright she had sent over to the dispensary for bandages.
A moment later Mrs. Boatwright appeared, her strong person wrapped in a quilted robe.
"This is a great relief," she said. "We had given you up."
"Have you sent word to Betty?" he asked quickly.
Mrs. Boatwright looked at him for a moment, without replying, then moved deliberately to the window.
"Something is wrong!" he cried. "What is it? Tell me! Is she here?"
"Really, Mr. Doane—this is the physician—I can not work if you move. Yes, she is here!"
Starting up suddenly, wrenching himself free from her skillful hands, Doane stood over Dr. Cassin, staring past her at the woman by the window.
"Will you please go to Betty?" he said, in a voice that trembled with feeling, "and tell her that I am here. Wake her. She must know at once. And try to prepare her mind—she mustn't see me first like this."
There was a breathless pause.
"You'll see her?" cried the father. "At once?"
"No," replied Mrs. Boatwright. "No, I am sorry, I would like to spare you pain at this time, Griggsby Doane. But I do not feel that I can see her. I'll tell you though what I will do, I'll tell Monsieur Pourmont. And she went out, as Elmer Boatwright entered.
Dr. Cassin broke the silence that followed.
"Mr. Doane," she said, "sit still here and try to listen to what I am going to tell you. We have been disturbed about Betty. I won't attempt to conceal that. This Mr. Boatwright—'Bracey' is he—
"Please! You must keep quiet!"
"But what is it? Tell me—now!"
"I'm trying to. Mr. Boatwright came to the compound the morning after you left—
"But he gave me his word!"
"You really must let me tell this in my own way. He brought the news of your death. He demanded that we all leave T'ai-nan at once, with him. It he gave you his word, it is probable that he regarded your death as a release. Well... For a moment she bent silently over her task of bandaging.
"Yes, Tell me!"
"Well... Mrs. Boatwright felt that it was not yet the time to go. She distrusted this man. So we stayed a few days longer.
"You are not telling me."
"Yes, I am coming to it. Betty... Betty felt that she couldn't let him go alone."
"So she came with him?"
"Dr. Cassin bowed. Elmer Boatwright bowed.
"And they are here now?"
"Betty is staying with Madame Pourmont. Mr. Boatwright is living in a tent."
"Where? What tent?"
Elmer Boatwright did not wait to hear this question answered. Doane wasn't normal; that was plain. He might kill Bracey... And so, without a plan, Elmer Boatwright slipped out and hurried to Bracey's tent.
Bracey lay uncovered, dressed, as Boatwright saw when he struck a match to make certain of his man. Bracey started up instantly.
"Well?" he said.
"I have come on a peculiar errand, Br. Boatwright was fumbling for words. "There is little time for talk. A queer situation... let me say this—when you came to the mission it was under the supposition that Griggsby Doane was dead."
"Yes... You mean that now... that the news was inaccurate?"
Boatwright inclined his head.
"He is alive, then?"
Another bow.
Boatwright's head again inclined.
"I want to make it plain to you that he isn't altogether himself. He has some fever now, I believe. He has just now learned that you are here—that you—"
"That I brought his daughter here?"
The remark was cool, clear, decisive.
"Well—yes. My suggestion is—well, that you move over to the residence for the rest of the night."
"You mean that he may attack me?"
"Well—yes. It's quite possible that he's on his way here now."
"Where is Mr. Doane?" Bracey asked.
"He was in my room. But you're not—you don't mean—"
"I'm going to see him, of course!"

A few minutes later, Bracey stopped, looking about.
"This is the house, isn't it?" he remarked; then turned in toward the steps.
The door burst open then, and a huge shadowy figure plunged out. A woman's voice followed: "I must ask you to come back, Mr. Doane. Really, if you—"
At the name—"Mr. Doane"—Bracey stopped short and stiffened, his shoulders drawn back, his head high.
Doane, too, stopped, peering down. "Mr. Doane," said the younger man, firmly but perhaps in a slightly louder tone than was necessary, "I am Jonathan Bracey."
A hush fell on the group of them—Bracey waiting at the bottom step, Boatwright just behind him, Dr. Cassin barely visible, and Griggsby Doane staring down in astonishment.
"Monsieur Doane, it gives me a great pleasure to know that you do not die. To you here I offer ze welcome via all my heart. But it is I who am here ze commander. Am I now commander you, Monsieur Doane, ze must be here no more of ze matter personnel. We here fight together, as one, not via each other. Ze man is one I need. It is on 'in zat I lean."
Doane slowly lifted his head and looked at M. Pourmont. "Very well," he said quietly. "You are right, of course." He looked directly at Dr. Cassin as he said:
"I don't think so," replied the physician simply, wholly herself. "The skill doesn't seem to be fractured. We may find some concussion, of course."
Doane's breath whistled convulsively inward. Then he said—under his breath, but audible enough:
"What an awful thing to do! What a terrible thing to do! And yet you, Boatwright hurried to help him. "I'll go with you, Elmer," said Doane.
In the morning, Doane found Betty beside him. Their talk was of natural things and he decided that she hadn't been told of his attack on Bracey.
Some-what as he was, he was resolved to go through the enemy lines and reach a telephone office. He finally won M. Pourmont's consent to his plan.
"It's my job," he told the protesting Betty.
"Very well, dad. Then you must do it."
She patted his arm as she spoke; then added this: "Of course it's not the time to think of personal things. But there's one thing I've got to tell you pretty soon, dad. A strange experience has come to me. I can't see the way very clearly. It's a man."
She rushed on with it. "I wanted you to meet him tonight. He's—out in the trenches all day, up the hill. We're expecting word—a cablegram—when they get through to us. He'll come to you then. But I—well, I have had to tell you this much—that it's—it's—all right."
Doane sewed up his tattered knapsack, filled it with a sort of iron ration and early, as soon as darkness settled, slipped out of the compound and disappeared, carrying no weapon but his walking stick.
Mr. Po Bears Good Tidings.
Doane went out through the lines as he had come in through them, crawling, hiding, feeling his way foot by foot. He had allowed two hours for the journey through the lines, but it consumed nearly four, and toward one o'clock in the morning, now well to the eastward of the besieging force, he swung into his stride.
It seemed, in the retrospect, absurdly like the play of children to be ironing and crawling about the hillsides. But he was glad now that he had somehow, painfully, kept his head. Hating the unforeseen, the diplomatic gentlemen up at Peking when they came to their desks in the morning.
Shan Ting was but another of the innumerable rural villages that dot northern China.
At the telephone station Doane wrote out his messages, and stood over the man until they were sent; then walked toward the inn. Fastening his door he stretched out on the kang.
He was awakened at the close of day by the inn-keeper bringing food. The man set out two plates on the dusty old table. Doane sat on the edge of the kang and drowsily wondered why.
There was a knock at the door. In Chinese he called, "Enter!"
The door slowly opened, and a drab little man came in, walking with a slight limp. He carried a packet of papers.
"Griggs!" he exclaimed softly.
"Henry Withery?" cried Doane. "What on earth are you doing here?"
Withery smiled, and laid hat and packet on the table.
"I've arranged to dine with you," he explained. "You won't mind?"
"Of course not, Henry. But why are you here?"
"I came back to find you. A rumor came that you were killed."
Withery asked about the fighting. The whole outside world was watching these hills of Han, it appeared. The Imperial Government troops were on their way, from Hong Kong, from the Philippines, from Indo-China.
"By the way," said Withery a little later, "there is a lot of mail for Pourmont's people. It's been accumulating. There was no way to get it to them."
"I'll take it in," said Doane.
"You? You don't mean that you're going to run that gauntlet again, Griggs?"
"Yes."
He untied the packet, and looked through the little heap of envelopes. One was a cablegram addressed to Jonathan Bracey.
He held it in tense fingers; gazed at it long while the pulse mounted in his temples. "Oh, yes," he said, almost casually then, "I'm going back in. They'll be looking for me." But his thoughts were running wild again. Withery rose. "I'll go with you," he said.

"No," Doane declared. "You out of a village house; and then two other firmly holding a man in red and yellow with an embroidered square on the breast of his tunic that marked him as an officer of rank. Other soldiers followed, one bearing a large curved sword.

Without ceremony the officer's said nothing about it to her.

An odd little cavalcade arrived. The carved door of a sumptuous sedan chair opened, and a young Chinese gentleman, richly attired, stepped out. Calmly, deliberately, he entered the compound. One of the engineers, an American, addressed him in the Man-that he hated this dirty, bloody business. He saw no glory in fighting, merely primitive blood-lust; an outcropping of the beast in man; evidence that in his age-long struggle upward from the animal stage of existence man had yet a long, long way to climb.

But from the thought of losing this intense preoccupation, of living quietly with the emphasis again placed on personal problems, he found himself shrinking.
What a riddle it was! He spoke shortly to a French youth, took up his rifle, and led the way up the hill to the bullet-spattered farm compounds. They were quite deserted. Only the huddled, motionless dead remained.

Weary of spirit he returned to the rifle pits only to find these, too, deserted.

haven't the strength. You're not an outdoor man. We should have to separate anyway; together we should almost certainly be caught." He took the packet and went out.
As day broke, Griggsby Doane lay on the crest of a terraced hill looking off into the purple west. But a few miles farther on lay Ping Yang. Beneath him, near the foot of the slope four coolies were already at the radiating windlasses of a well. No outposts in the Looker uniform were to be seen. And he heard no shots. It would be a lull, then, in the fighting.
As he moved along he heard, far off, the shots his ears had strained for on the hill; one, another, then a spattering volley; but he walked straight on. The Mongols and Chinese on the road gave him no more than the usual glance of curiosity.
He came at length to a scenic area in a notch. Through the arch Ping Yang could be seen in its valley.
He stopped and looked. Near at hand were the tents of some of the Looker soldiery; beyond lay the compound of the Ho Shan company, lying as still as if it were deserted. There were no puffs of smoke, no sounds along the village street; between the outlying houses small figures appeared to be bustling about, but they made no noise that could be heard up here. The scene was unanny.
Two soldiers in blue came abruptly darin tongue. He replied, in a deep musical voice, with a pronounced intonation that gave this mellow language, to a casual ear, something the sound of French.

The engineer bowed, and together they moved toward the residence, where a somewhat mystified M. Pourmont awaited them.
Jonathan Bracey sat moodily on the parapet.
The thing might be over; it might not. Bracey found himself almost perversely disturbed, however, at the prospect of peace. He had supposed

Rail Strike Causes Slight Liquidations

New York, August 24.—Considerable irregularity developed in today's fairly active stock market, but there was abundant evidence that the control of the market continues to be in strong hands.

Unfavorable overnight developments in the rail strike situation did not result in any extensive liquidation of carrier shares, although many issues yielded slightly at the start because of general uncertainty as to what the market would do. Substantial support set in, however, and the market steadied.

United States Steel duplicated its high price, with sympathetic advances in shares of some of the independent companies.

Heavy liquidation continued in the stocks of shipping companies engaged in the Atlantic trade in anticipation of a sharp cut in passenger rates.

Tobacco products A moved to higher ground on the announcement that the stock had been placed on a 7 per cent dividend basis.

American Telephone broke 4 points on the announcement that the directors had authorized the issuance of $115,000,000 additional stock to its present shareholders, but it recovered about half of its loss before the close. Total sales were 1,065,000 shares.

Call money opened and renewed at 3 3/4 per cent but it hardened to 3 1/2 in the final hour. Rates for time money and commercial paper were unchanged.

Another collapse in German marks, which fell to the unprecedented low rate of 5 3/8 cents a hundred, as compared with 6 3/4 yesterday and 5 5/8 a week ago, featured the foreign exchange market. French francs also dropped 16 points to a new low for the year, while most other European remittances eased several points.

News, Views And Reviews

There was a battle of traders today with determined group trying to move the stock market. The market was equally divided in looking for stocks that could be advanced. Hence there was considerable irregularity, but generally speaking the market was better than we had anticipated.

A short interest in Studebaker was run to cover by commission house buying, but the other motors were quite inactive. Weak spots were found in the shipping stocks and the railroads.

Non-American Petroleum remained strong on reports of enormous earnings. Tobacco Products "A" at 83 looks cheap enough when the $7 dividend rate is considered. The western rail looks higher particularly if the latest crop reports are making serious settlements with the shippers, or rather if the shippers succeed in making settlements with the railroads—Borums, Daniel & Co.

Summary.

Professional element on the floor and in outside speculations expressed extreme bearish opinions after the close yesterday and insisted that there must be real liquidation in many issues. Bank of England's minimum rate discount has been reached at a conference at Kansas City.

fooling the Fish.

(John B. Thompson in Adventure Magazine.)
As fish grow up in a pond I am sure they feel the vibration from a man's movements on shore; also the small fish that feed in shallow water seem to be quick at the presence of man and somehow or other transmit this to the other fish by their actions of getting into deep water.
I have studied this subject a great deal, and finally began wading. I got to where I wanted to cast, and after getting in the water never made any movement whatever for a long time. I am sure fish do not see you when you are waist deep in water as they do when you are on shore. I used the lightest artificial lures with the grooved heads that I could get. They went deep on fast reeling and brought out many a big fellow.
When using a fly rod often I had good results from a bucktail and an O spinner, the smallest size. I used many times with success the little fly rod wooden plugs, one of the best methods is to attach a dropper fly as usual and carry along the little plug as trailer. This looks like a minnow chasing a fly, and very few bass can resist it. Many ponds like yours are fine for late evening and night fishing. The best killers are bass bugs with fly rod, and any surface minnow. With it reel slowly, and you will have a fine thrill when they strike.

The English walnut is not English at all. This nut came originally from China, according to records, since 1500 B. C., which is about the time that Chinese schools were started. Another familiar native of China is the peanut, which is now so widely resident of Virginia. The peanut was grown and eaten in China centuries before Columbus discovered the land of which Virginia peanut fields are now a part. The Indian nut, a tiny but wonderfully flavored and nourishing pine tree seed, is found only in North and South America, and is the seed of the pine nut. It is about the size of a navy bean, is autumnal brown in color, with dapples and striations of a deeper brown, making it beautiful to look at. It is highly charged with oil and is most delicious. It is the principal food of mountain squirrels or chipmunks. The wood of the tree which produces this seed is the best firewood in the world. It burns slowly, producing beautiful colors of flame and great heat. It abounds most profusely in the temperate zone Rockies. The Colorado Rockies produce it in great quantities. The pine nut finds no favor in its native country except among the squirrels. There is little sale for pine nuts in the west, but the western mountaineers make much money gathering the nuts for the markets of the big eastern cities.

Although the motor car is now common in Japan, many of the more conservative Japanese retain their "stables" of human horses and ornate carriages. Rickshaws men in private employment often wear handsome uniforms, on which the crest of the employer is embroidered. They have wonderful speed of endurance. Ten miles an hour is not an uncommon pace, and two men, alternately taking the post of leader and wheeler, will keep it up fifty or sixty miles. Still, it is a pace that kills, and it used to be said that the life of a rickshaw coolie did not exceed ten years after he took to the road.

Among the Greeks and Romans the peacock was sacred.

The Persians were said to think fire to be a god.

"Gorbodue," first English tragedy, was acted in 1562.
